GORDON SMAILES

FOOTBALL results are more than just mere statistics. For football fans they are milestones, not only in a football-watching career but in a very life itself. Somewhere there is the first top-class match they ever saw, the moment they realised that their team had been promoted or relegated, the day they missed a match to get married, the day they phoned home from a foreign holiday to enquire, breathlessly, of that all-important result. Even, perhaps, the result that gave them the eighth draw and a fortune.

Of course, the results are also a mirror of the history of the game and The Breedon Book of Scottish Football Records charts the story of soccer North of the Border.

In a truly astonishing feat of research, statistician Gordon Smailes has compiled the dates and results of every Scottish League game, every Scottish Cup game, every League Cup game from each competition's first season right up to the end of the 1994-95 campaign. Complemented with League tables for each season and with fascinating illustrations, the result is a book which will delight anyone interested in the game in Scotland and will settle, once and for all, the arguments about who did what in the Scottish League and Cup competitions.

Looking for the Right Result

by Andrew Ward

WHAT follows is a complete record of Scottish first-class football results. Add in the intonation of a voice, picture the scenes at the final whistle, recollect an image of where the news was first heard, and football results turn into vivid memories. Somewhere in this book you may be able to trace the first top-class game you ever saw, the moment you realised your team was relegated or promoted, the day of the wedding when you missed a game, the time you were on holiday and telephoned from a public call-box, and, if you've been really lucky, the eighth draw that brought your fortune.

When people are a long way from home, hearing a score takes on special significance. The bare details of 'the result' can spark such speculation, such pride, such longing and such identification. I often think of soldiers overseas. During World War Two, men of the 15th Scottish Division huddled round their Tam o' Shanter newsletters in France, Belgium, Holland and Germany. They read aloud the results of the Scottish Southern League – "Clyde five Hearts one, Motherwell two Celtic one" – and made them stretch as far as they possibly could.

Part of football's history concerns the various ways that results have been sprung upon us. In the early part of the century it was done by telegraph, newspapers and pigeon post. Pigeon fanciers would take three or four birds to the match and let them off at regular intervals in order to relay the score to a waiting village or newspaper offices. The results service has come a long way from those days, to Ceefax, club calls and Internet. Successive generations of fans have relied on wirelesses, transistors, televisions, teleprinters and frantic telephone calls to friends. Or they have stopped their car at a set of traffic-lights, rolled down a window and asked a passer-by who is wearing the right scarf, "What was the score?" Sometimes there was no need – the result was written across faces.

The story of official Scottish results begins in 1873, when 15 clubs subscribed towards the purchase of the Scottish Cup. The trophy and a full set of medals cost £56 12s 11d. Queen's Park won the Cup that year, and went on to dominate the early years with ten Scottish Cup wins in the first 20 seasons.

The Scottish Cup was soon providing us with some wonderful statistics. There is the well-chronicled tie on 5 September 1885 when Arbroath beat Bon Accord 36-0 with Petrie scoring thirteen. On the same day Dundee Harp thrashed Aberdeen Rovers 35-0 in the same competition, a result that has not been accorded the glamour it deserves. It must have been like Elisha Gray and Alexander Graham Bell turning up on the same day to file patent accounts dealing with the invention of the telephone.

Aside from Scottish Cup matches, clubs in the 1880s relied on friendlies and matches in minor competitions. The games could hardly be called 'fixtures' – there were too many late cancellations for that. Inevitably, the idea of a more organised fixture list was discussed, and this led to the formation of the Scottish League, on 30 April 1890. The League was based on the English model and had 11 founder members: Abercorn, Celtic, Cowlairs, Cambuslang, Dumbarton, Hearts, Rangers, St Mirren, Renton, Third Lanark and Vale of Leven. Reporters were quick to analyse the motivation behind the organisation. Said Scottish Sport: "Our first and last objection to them is that they exist. The entire rules stink of finance – money making and money grabbing."

Unlike clubs in the English League, their Scottish counterparts were bound to amateur status. In the League's first season, Celtic, Third Lanark and Cowlairs each had four points deducted for infringements of registration rules, and Renton were banned by the Scottish FA after only five League matches. Renton's crime was playing a friendly against a new club called Edinburgh Saints (which was really a hastily reformed St Bernard's after the latter had been banned by the authorities for 'concealed professionalism'). Renton and Edinburgh Saints were turfed out of the Scottish FA and both sets of players suspended.

That first season, 1890-91, was a wonderful start for the statistically minded. Dumbarton and Rangers finished level on points and drew 2-2 in their play-off match. In the absence of goal average – it wasn't introduced until 1922 – they were declared joint champions, the only time it has happened.

The Renton case was not an isolated instance of clubs violating the amateur rules. Many players were being paid, and the authorisation of professionalism, in 1893, was a sign that the Scottish Football Association had accepted the inevitable. When Celtic's John McLaughlin, secretary of the League, spoke at the 1893 Scottish FA annual meeting, he put it succinctly: "You might as well attempt to stop the flow of Niagara with a kitchen chair as to endeavour to stem the tide of professionalism."

Queen's Park had initially declined the opportunity for League soccer, but when their major fixtures disappeared they accepted the necessity of progress and joined the Scottish League in 1900. Although they won the Scottish Cup for the tenth (and last) time in 1893, Queen's Park were slipping away as a national force. Thereafter, the history of top-class Scottish soccer became irretrievably linked with the history of 'the Old Firm' – Rangers and Celtic. Rangers first qualified for a Scottish Cup Final in 1877, but, two years later, failed to turn up for the replay with Vale of Leven after being incensed at a decision in the first game. Celtic were formed later, in 1887, but had the edge in the period before the World War One.

In 1893, the year professionalism was legitimised, Division Two was formed. There was no automatic promotion and relegation between the two divisions – that wasn't introduced until 1921 – and clubs in the lower division relied on the First Division 'electing' new members. Hence, in 1905, Falkirk (second) and Aberdeen (seventh) were elected to Division One, whereas Clyde (Division Two's champions) had to stay down. Meanwhile, clubs like Port Glasgow and Queen's Park retained their Division One status despite poor placings in the higher division in the 1900s and 1910s.

There are some startling statistics from those early years: Celtic's unbeaten season of 1897-98; Rangers' 100 per cent record of 1898-99; Kilmarnock's unbeaten Division Two season of 1898-99; Third Lanark's championship of 1904 and Scottish Cup win of 1905; Celtic's astonishing defensive record of 1913-14 when they conceded only 14 goals in 38 games; Celtic's two games in a day at the end of 1915-16 season (against Raith Rovers in the afternoon and Motherwell in the evening); and 76 points out of 84 for Rangers in 1920-21. In other instances, however, statistics disappear from the records, like the abandoned Scottish Cup tie of 1905, when Rangers led ten-men Celtic 2-0 and fans invaded the pitch.

Already, Celtic and Rangers had begun their dominance, and the Scottish League became near enough an Old Firm monopoly. Between 1904, when Third Lanark were champions, and 1948 (Hibernian), only Motherwell, in 1931-32, wrested the League flag from the two premier Glasgow teams. That period began with Celtic winning six consecutive League titles (1904-05 to 1909-10). Manager Willie Maley shrewdly satisfied the first golden rule of management – get good players. He had Alec McNair at full-back, a half-back line of Young, Loney and Hay, the powerful Jimmy Quinn at centre-forward, the zippy Alex Bennett on one wing and Jimmy McMenemy and Peter Somers orchestrating from inside-forward.

During World War One, football was largely insignificant when compared with the brutal conflict which brought the deaths of many footballers. Players of some teams, like Queen's Park and Hearts, had enlisted en bloc. The Scottish Cup was abandoned, and, although the Scottish League continued, it was a shadow of itself, some of the events resembling those of local amateur soccer. In November 1915, for instance, Rangers fielded nine players against Falkirk; and, on 20 January 1917, Partick Thistle fielded a substitute against Rangers.

After World War One a rebel Central League caused disruption, and a number of clubs broke away from Division Two. These clubs were lured back with the promise of automatic relegation and promotion. The Second Division was reformed in 1921 after a gap of seven years, and it included 11 new clubs. A First Division of 22 clubs was deemed to be too large, which led to three clubs being relegated and only one promoted at the end of 1921-22. Alloa Athletic were the first Scottish team to be automatically promoted on merit.

The following season 'goal-average' was introduced to separate teams on the same number of points. It was a curious name to describe 'the number of goals scored divided by the number of goals conceded' but the calculation managed to reach parts of the brain that whole education systems have sometimes failed to reach. Another dramatic change came with the new offside law, in 1925, when the Scots put forth a proposal at a meeting of the International Football Federation. With only two defenders, rather than three, needed behind the ball when it was last played, the game became easier for attackers, and 1925-26 saw the return of high scores.

If Celtic came out on top in the period leading up to World War One, Rangers were undoubtedly the more successful during the inter-war period, winning the League 15 times in 20 seasons under the stewardship of manager Willie Struth. This was during the heyday of players like Alan Morton, Davie Meiklejohn and Bob McPhail. Surprisingly, Rangers did not win the Cup between 1903 and 1928, although that did not stop Bob McPhail ending up with seven Scottish Cup winners' medals (including one for Airdrie in 1924). It was a man associated with Celtic, however, who set goalscoring standards that will never be equalled. Jimmy McGrory scored a British record 550 goals in first-class football, including eight in one match against Dunfermline in 1928.

Although Rangers dominated the inter-war years, there was enough excitement and competition to sustain interest outside Glasgow. Airdrieonians, for instance, were runners-up in four consecutive seasons (1922-23 to 1925-26) and Motherwell finished in the top three eight times in succession (1926-27 to 1933-34). A number of new names appeared on the Scottish Cup in the 1920s – Kilmarnock (1920), Partick Thistle (1921), Morton (1922), Airdrie (1924) and St Mirren (1926). Then, after the Old Firm had seemingly regained its grip on the competition, there came two more surprises – Second Division East Fife (1938) and Clyde (1939).

In the League, the most bizarre 'achievements' came from Edinburgh City, an all-amateur team known as 'the Queen's Park of the east'. Elected to Division Two in 1931, they showed remarkable consistency over the next eight seasons, conceding 981 goals in 276 games, an average of 3.62 per game. They finished bottom of Division Two no fewer than six times, and were responsible for one unenviable statistic: East Fife 13 Edinburgh City 2. On a clear day City could see no higher than 15th place in the League table.

After a few games of 1939-40, the Scottish League was suspended for the duration of World War Two. The following season, the Southern League began as a separate organisation, and clubs in the north and the east followed suit in 1941-42 with their own league. The North-Eastern League was unusual in awarding extra points for draws and victories away from home.

When football returned to something more normal, in 1945-46, the divisions were lettered 'A' and 'B' rather than numbered '1' and '2'. Soon, in 1946-47, a 'C' Division arrived, and Stirling Albion made an immediate impact, racing through the three divisions in three seasons. This third division, however, like its three-year predecessor in the early 1920s, was not to prove a permanent addition to the League's structure. It lasted from 1946 to 1955.

The wartime period also saw the birth of the League Cup model. It began with four sections, each section consisting of four teams playing each other home and away on a league basis. The winners of each mini-league qualified for the semi-finals. These additional fixtures served to extend the meagre wartime programme. The League Cup became an official competition in 1946-47, and this brought a new target for Scottish clubs – 'the treble'.

The first club to achieve the treble were Rangers, in 1948-49. The Ibrox club had maintained their pre-war momentum with a team known for their 'Iron Curtain' defence – Bobby Brown, George Young, Jock 'Tiger' Shaw, Ian McColl, Willie Woodburn and Sammy Cox – and two magnificent attackers in Willie Waddell and Willie Thornton. But, in those post-war years, clubs other than Rangers and Celtic showed that they, too, could attract large attendances. Good players stayed longer than usual with provincial clubs and teams were settled enough to challenge the Glasgow duo. Between 1946-47 and 1952-53, Hibernian won the League three times and were runners-up on three other occasions. In the late 1950s and the early 1960s, other clubs reached new heights of League success – Aberdeen, Hearts, Dundee and Kilmarnock – and the Cup competitions proved to be exciting and unpredictable.

Hibernian's great post-war team had Tommy Younger in goal and the 'Famous Five' forward line of Gordon Smith, Bobby Johnstone, Lawrie Reilly, Eddie Turnbull and Willie Ormond. Gordon Smith went on to win League winners' medals with three different clubs (Hibernian, Hearts and Dundee), an astonishing achievement for someone who didn't play with either Rangers or Celtic. The Hearts team of 1957-58, scorers of 132 goals to win the League, could field the 'Terrible Trio' of Alfie Conn, Willie Bauld and Jimmy Wardhaugh.

By the time Dundee won the League, in 1962, provincial clubs were beginning to sense the impact of the removal of the maximum wage in England. It became very difficult for clubs other than Rangers and Celtic to hang on to good players, and a succession of stars left Scotland at the start of the 1960s – George Mulhall (Aberdeen), Jim Storrie (Airdrie), Eddie Connachan (Dunfermline), George Herd (Clyde), John McLeod and Joe Baker (Hibs), Bobby Kennedy (Kilmarnock), Alex Young, Gordon Marshall and Bobby Blackwood (Hearts), Jimmy Gabriel and Ian Ure (Dundee), Ian St John and Pat Quinn (Motherwell), Dave Hilley, Matt Gray and Alex Harley (Third Lanark), Tommy Bryceland and Gerry Baker (St Mirren), Ron Yeats (Dundee United) and Bertie Auld (Celtic).

After this exodus, power reverted almost exclusively to the Old Firm, with the exception of 1964-65, when Kilmarnock won the title on goal-average after beating nearest-rivals Hearts by the required 2-0 on the final day of the season. In 1963-64 Rangers launched their new strength by winning the treble again. Manager Scot Symon's team included Bobby Shearer, Ron McKinnon and John Greig in defence, Willie Henderson and Davie Wilson on the wings, Jim Forrest and Ralph Brand up front and Jim Baxter all over the place. At the other end of the spectrum, Third Lanark faded into obscurity. They folded in 1967 and were lost to the League.

The most dramatic watershed came in February 1965 when Jock Stein took over as Celtic manager. Captained mainly by Billy McNeill, Celtic won the championship for nine successive seasons from 1965-66 to 1973-74, and became the first British team to win the European Cup. The 'Lisbon Lions', who beat Internazionale 2-1 in Lisbon to take the European Cup, are indelibly etched on many a mind: Simpson, Craig, Gemmell, Murdoch, McNeill, Clark, Johnstone, Wallace, Chalmers, Auld, Lennox.

The advent of the 1970s brought more changes to the Scottish soccer scene – the Texaco Cup, the Drybrough Cup, goal-difference, two substitutes – but Jock Stein's Celtic just went on and on. Without paying transfer fees of any great note, Stein was able to call on a new generation of players – McBride, Hughes, Hay, Williams, Hood, Macari, Connelly, McGrain, Dalglish, Deans, etc – and his team became hungry for more and more trophies. The stranglehold was finally broken in 1974-75, when Jock Stein was incapacitated after a horrific car accident and Rangers won the treble.

Between 1970-71 and 1978-79, every Scottish League and Scottish Cup competition was won by one of the Old Firm. Fortunately, for lesser mortals, the League Cup retained some of its unpredictability, especially in 1972 when Partick Thistle smacked four early goals past Celtic in the Final. And to prove there was still open competition, Hibernian and Dundee won the next two League Cup Finals.

In 1975 the Scottish League was restructured – a ten-club Premier Division, a 14-club Division One and a 14-club Division Two. The new structure gave a chance to Ferranti Thistle (later known as Meadowbank Thistle), an Edinburgh works team called in to extend the numbers to a more manageable 38. However, the new structure was to benefit clubs at the top rather than those at the bottom. Premier Division clubs played each other four times a season, a better prospect for high attendances, especially with four Rangers-Celtic derbies instead of two. But the Premier League, like so many Premier Leagues, initially created a fear of relegation rather than a quest for winning championships.

Two months after the arrival of manager Jock Stein, Celtic lift the Scottish FA Cup with a victory over Dunfermline to embark on an amazing dominance of Scottish football with nine successive League titles and many Cup wins, including the European Cup.

The new system's first casualty was the Spring Cup, which lasted only one season. This competition was open to First and Second clubs, who were split into seven groups of four for the qualifying competition. Sixteen teams – the top two in each group plus the two third-placed teams with the best records – went forward to the knock-out stage. When Airdrie beat Clydebank 4-2 in the Final at Firhill Park, after extra-time, there were only 5,000 present, so the competition was doomed. Thereafter, to make up for the loss of fixtures, the First and Second Division teams played each other three times a season instead of twice.

The first four seasons of the Premier League brought a familiar ring to the names on the trophy – Rangers, Celtic, Rangers, Celtic – and a Rangers team managed by Jock Wallace twice won the treble (1975-76 and 1977-78). Wallace's team was built around John Greig, Tom Forsyth, Colin Jackson, Alec MacDonald, Derek Johnstone and Tommy McLean. But Celtic, with the likes of Kenny Dalglish, Danny McGrain and a young Roy Aitken, were always in contention.

Then, in the 1980s, came a big challenge from the east of the country. In that decade, Aberdeen won the League championship three times, the Scottish Cup four times and the League Cup twice. Managed by Alex Ferguson, the club could field players like Alex McLeish and Willie Miller in defence, and Gordon Strachan, Mark McGhee and Peter Weir in attack. In 1982-83 Aberdeen won the European Cup-winners' Cup by beating Real Madrid 2-1 in Gothenburg. Their team that night was: Leighton, Rougvie, Miller, McLeish, McMaster, Cooper, Strachan, Simpson, Weir, McGhee, Black (Hewitt).

That same season, 1982-83, Dundee United took the League title, and the balance of power continued to shift eastwards. It didn't last for long, though. After Hearts had failed on goal-difference to win the League in 1985-86 – on the last day of the season they lost at Dundee while Celtic were scoring five against St Mirren at Love Street – the next run of League champions had that familiar Old Firm ring.

The arrival at Rangers of Graeme Souness, as player-manager in 1986, began a sustained period of success for the Ibrox club. The traditional Scotland-England exodus was now reversed. Star players like Terry Butcher, Trevor Steven, Gary Stevens, Mark Hateley, Trevor Francis and Chris Woods moved across the border, but this time it was from England to Rangers. The most sensational signing was that of Maurice Johnston from Nantes in 1989, when Rangers broke with its Protestant tradition by signing a Catholic.

Meanwhile, the authorities were still experimenting with the structure of Scottish soccer. In 1986-87, a League system with two 12-club divisions at the top created an arduous programme of 44 Premier League games. This lasted only two seasons before a return to the 10-14-14 divisional structure. Another three seasons and a mid-season decision increased the Premier League from ten to 12 again, saving two clubs from relegation. In 1994-95, the next format – four ten-club divisions – came in. This provided opportunities for two Highland League clubs, Ross County and Caledonian Thistle (themselves an amalgam of two clubs), who were elected to the new Division Three.

Manager Alex Ferguson celebrates with his Aberdeen team after they won the Scottish League championship in 1979-80. They were to lift the title a further twice during the 1980s as well as four Scottish Cup and two League Cup wins. A victory over Real Madrid in Gothenburg gave them the European Cup-winners' Cup in 1983.

Penalty competitions arrived in the Skol Cup (the sponsored League Cup) and the Scottish Cup. It wasn't too long before the Finals were settled by such means, spectacularly so in 1990, when Aberdeen won the Scottish Cup by beating Celtic 9-8 on the 20th penalty. And then, in 1994-95, Raith Rovers stressed the uncertainty of the Skol Cup by winning on penalties from Celtic. Raith Rovers were the first team outside the top flight to win a major trophy since East Fife won the League Cup in 1947-48.

The success of Raith Rovers is a reminder that the Scottish League stretches far beyond the confines of the Old Firm, or even the Premier League. This book captures not only moments of brilliant success but also times of glorious failure. Not only can you trace how Rangers won the treble in 1992-93, but you can relive the last 13 League games of Stirling Albion's 1980-81 season, when they failed to score a goal. They played 1,293 goalless minutes, and 500 or so fans still turned up to watch the last game of the season. Like all fans – and managers and players – they were still looking for 'the right result'. This book has thousands of them.

Ally McCoist joins in the celebrations as Rangers beat Aberdeen in the 1992-93 Skol Cup Final.

Scottish League & FA Cup Results

During this earlier period there are occasions where either the date or score is missing, this is due to being unable to trace these details. Where the italicised W and O appears instead of the score, the result was a walk-over. For the first few years of the Scottish FA Cup byes were often awarded, resulting in clubs missing out certain rounds.

Brown of Kilmarnock rushes out to intercept the ball from the oncoming South African-born Johnny Hubbard of Rangers.

Although he has five Partick defenders to deal with, Conn of Hearts manages to squeeze the ball home between defender Collins and goalkeeper Ledgerwood.

	played at Hampden Park

Coates of Queen's Park beats Third Lanark's goalkeeper Robertson in this third-round tie. But Queen's Park were the losers in this eight-goal thriller.

Kilmarnock's goalkeeper is in a spot of bother in this Cup-tie against Queen of the South.

Action from the 1969 Scottish Cup Final. Although Celtic's Chalmers went on to score from this challenge on Rangers' Martin, his effort was disallowed. However, Celtic did manage to put four past Rangers that day and complete the treble of League title and both Cups.

Celtic in 1949-50, when they failed to qualify in their Section 'A' League Cup Group that included St Mirren, Aberdeen and Rangers. In the semi-final Rangers were to lose to East Fife, who collected the trophy that year. Rangers gained revenge later that season when they beat East Fife 3-0 in the SFA Cup. Rangers were also League champions for the second year running.

Final

Oct 23	Celtic 2	Rangers 1
	played at Hampden Park

It's the first for Celtic as big John Hughes sends Rangers' goalkeeper Billy Ritchie the wrong way in the 1965-66 League Cup Final.

In 1971-72 Celtic, in the middle of a 14-year unbroken run of reaching the League Cup Final, were soundly beaten by unfancied Partick Thistle, who had just gained promotion to the First Division the previous season. Here, Lou Macari and Bobby Murdoch leave the field together with Partick's Alex Forsyth (right). Celtic successfully defended their League and SFA Cup trophies though.
